Sauereisen Gives Back to the Community: Donating Food and Time to Aid Local Food Banks

Pittsburgh, July 2011 — O'Hara Township-based Sauereisen, Inc., a 112-year old manufacturer of corrosion-resistant materials, was looking for a project to benefit the local area and local people. On July 22nd Sauereisen employees loaded up boxes of non-perishable grocery items, donated by the Sauereisen employees, and headed to Hartwood Acres, for the 17th annual Pittsburgh Blues Festival, the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank's largest annual event. After unloading the grocery items onto food bank trucks, all the attending employees donated their time to work as traffic control, parking lot attendants, and welcome center hostesses at the Festival. Despite the oppressive heat, torrential down pour and roaring thunderstorms, we persevered for a cause greater than ourselves.

“There were several beneficial and very worthy projects that we discussed, but in the end, the employees had chosen a project to benefit many people of Allegheny County,” said Sauereisen Sales Manager, Lake H. Barrett. “The committee narrowed the choices down to Habitat for Humanity, United Way’s Day of Caring and the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank.”

“We felt that this was a fundraiser that we could all participate in and we knew this was a worthy cause. Over the past sixteen years, the Blues Festival has raised more than $1.2 million to fight hunger in 11 counties of southwestern Pennsylvania. We have a lot of neighbors in need and we want to reach out to them as best we can,” says Mackenzie Paesano, Sauereisen’s Sales Administrator.

“You are a critical part of this organization and you undeniably contribute to making our region a healthier, stronger community for us all. Thank you for your time, energy and passion ~ they are priceless gifts!” Alyssa Jurewicz-Johns, Volunteer Manager.

Established in 1899, Sauereisen is a third-generation manufacturer that provides worldwide product distribution of corrosion-resistant materials. The company is dedicated to establishing expertise in the prevention of corrosion and the restoration of structures affected by it.
